BIO

Gabry Fasano's music career began with the rise of house music in 1988. That same year, after spending the summer in Ibiza, he established himself as a headliner at avant-garde house parties in Florentine villas, significantly contributing to the birth of the electronic music movement in the years that followed. Starting in 1990, with his pioneering work, he became the driving force behind the best underground clubs in Tuscany, helping transform them into symbols of great innovation for over a decade. The first of these was Club Imperiale in Tirrenia. His success was immediate, and soon, it became the first after-club to introduce an unprecedented schedule, running from midnight to noon.

In the summer of 1990, Gabry embarked on a new adventure, taking over the DJ booth at Kama Kama in Viareggio. The club, which had previously been known for years as a dark punk venue, reopened in June 1990 with a fresh new vision, achieving massive success. Within just a few weeks, it became one of the most famous house music venues for the next two decades. In 1992, Gabry took the decks at the legendary Insomnia club in Ponsacco, near Pisa. This marked the explosion of the techno scene in Tuscany, attracting thousands of clubbers every Saturday night.

1994 was a turning point for Gabry. After careful consideration, he made the switch to the DJ booth at Jaiss in Empoli. With its massive sound system and a wild crowd gathering from all over Italy, Jaiss became the most famous and influential techno club for over ten years. In 2000, Gabry became a resident DJ at Cocoricò in Riccione. In 2002, he joined Mauro Picotto's Meganite project, performing alongside internationally renowned artists and touring worldwide, playing in countries like Germany, Spain, Switzerland, England, Scotland, Ireland, the United States, Colombia, Brazil, Argentina, Singapore, and more. During this time, Gabry also collaborated with Riccardo Ferri, producing numerous hits on Mauro Picotto's Alchemy Records label.

From 2004 to 2009, he was a resident DJ for Meganite at Privilege in Ibiza. In 2010, he performed for Meganite @ Come Together at Space Ibiza, and in 2011, for Alchemy @ Come Together, also at Space Ibiza. Since 2006, Gabry has been performing regularly at the best venues and events in Tuscany and beyond.
